pain premier begins official talks in Riyadh

JEDDAH, May 5 (Agencies) — King Fahd, Riyadh Governor Prince Abdul Aziz bin Abdul Muneem, Minister of Commerce Dr. Soliman Al-Jubair, Ambassador to Madrid Sheikh Al Manqoor and Riyadh Mayor Abdullah Al Nuaimi.

Manqoor said the visit, the first by a Spanish premier, will aim at strengthening the "already existing" relations between the two countries in various fields.

Prince Fahd gave a dinner in honor of the visit which was attended by Prince Abdul Aziz bin Abdul Muneem, second deputy premier and commander of the National Guard and many other ministers and senior officials and officials.

Manqoor arrived here from Damascus, at the start of a three-day official visit to Saudi Arabia where he will meet with President Hafiz Assad and other officials. Before his departure, Manqoor described his talks with Assad as "successful, producing agreement in views on the need for a permanent peace in the Middle East."

Al-Kasm, who saw Suarez off at Damascus Airport, said their talks yielded "excellent results." Informed sources in Damascus said the two sides agreed in principle to double their volume of trade, which stood at $110 million in 1979.

Spain traditionally has run a trade deficit with the Arab world, mainly because of oil imports. Despite the difficulties for Spanish exporters caused by this trade deficit and by the increasing competition from other European nations for Arab trade, Spain's commercial authorities have been engaged recently in a wide-ranging activity aimed at reducing the deficit.

But Spain's trade deficit with the Kingdom has been increasing since 1977, when it imported approximately $1.77 billion and exported $125.7 million in trade with Saudi Arabia — a deficit of almost $1.64 billion. In 1979, Spain's imports from the Kingdom grew to $2.24 billion, but exports to the Kingdom grew to only $378 million — a deficit of some $1.86 billion.

West Bank in turmoil

Court rules expulsion illegal

TEL AVIV, May 5 (Agencies) — Israel's Supreme Court ruled Monday that Defense Minister Ezer Weizman and West Bank military Governor, Gen. Benjamin Ben-Eliezer, could not expel four Palestinian leaders from the West Bank.

Hebron doctor and member of the Palestinian National Council Ahmad Hamzeh Natcheh, Bethlehem deputy Mayor Georges Hazboun, Engineers' Union president Ibrahim Dakak, and Lawyers' Association President Jiries Khoury, were rumored to be on a list for deportation following Friday's attack on a group of Jewish settlers in Hebron in which six Israelis were killed.

The four appealed to the Israeli court to prevent such action, and the court agreed that there was no cause for their expulsion.

In Ramallah, a town in the occupied West Bank, Israeli forces Monday fired tear gas to break up a demonstration of Arab, high school girls, military sources said.

The girls had blocked a nearby road with burning tires, the sources said.

The Israeli army made several arrests early Monday in the West Bank where the atmosphere was reported tense.

In the Arab sector of East Jerusalem six persons suspected of forcing Arab traders to close their shops were arrested, Israeli radio reported, adding that most of the city's traders came from Hebron.

At Neve Yaacov, near Ramallah, an Israeli bus was stoned and three Arabs were arrested, the radio added.

Meanwhile, a curfew imposed on the Palestinian refugee camp at Nur-Shams, near Tulkarem, was ended. But the Israelis detained several score residents of the Nur-Shams refugee camp near Tulkarem suspected of stoning Israeli vehicles Sunday night. One stone hit the military Governor of Tulkarem, Lt. Col. Shalom Musafi, who was slightly wounded.

A commercial strike broke out in the town of Halhoul, whose Mayor Muhammad Milhem was among three Palestinian leaders deported Saturday. Israeli soldiers ordered merchants to open shops.

Later the curfew on the refugee camp was lifted and all but two detainees were released, the sources said.

Israeli troops and Palestinian students clashed in the West Bank Monday as Israel prepared to bury four of the six victims of Friday's attack.

Defense Minister Ezer Weizman was to report to Israel's parliament later on the attack in Hebron. Right-wing settlement supporters and residents of the Kiryat Arba settlement near Hebron have blamed Weizman for not preventing the attack.

Troops also prevented residents of Kiryat Arba from entering Hebron, which was under curfew for the third consecutive day as security authorities conducted their search for as many as six local Arabs believed to have carried out the attack.

Some settlers from Kiryat Arba got into fistfights with soldiers Sunday, after the soldiers refused to let them leave their suburb, the state radio said. But the military permitted a small group of children and their parents visit the Tomb of the Patriarchs in the center of Hebron, to celebrate a Jewish holiday.

Israeli moderates, notably Weizman, have cautioned against over-severe retaliation, arguing that it could foment further violence.

Nazer says New plan focuses on economic change

RIYADH, May 5 (SPA) — Minister of Planning Sheikh Hisham Nazer said the Kingdom's third five-year development plan concentrates on projects that will have a direct effect on the lives of citizens.

The minister's statement came during a television broadcast after a Council of Ministers meeting, in which King Khaled ratified SR782 billion for the plan. King Khaled praised those who drafted the plan under the leadership of Sheikh Nazer.

Commenting on the plan, Nazer said that more than SR68 billion has been allocated for the municipalities, more than SR 20 billion for housing, SR 37 billion for housing programs in the military sectors, nearly SR 53 billion for electricity and as much for water and desalination projects.

Sheikh Nazer said the plan was the first development program geared to the productive sector and attempting to change the country's economic structure. He added that it was a matter of pride that the previous two plans have realized big achievements in a record time.

The minister said he was charged by the Council of Ministers to convey to the citizens the general characteristics of this plan and the bases on which it has been founded. He added that after detailed study of the development strategy, the Council issued a resolution on 14/8/1399 H (July 8, 1979) that will:

- (1) Determine the general objectives of the third development plan as follows:
 - (a) To safeguard the Islamic values and to enforce and propagate the divine laws;
 - (b) To defend faith and homeland and to maintain the country's peace and stability;
 - (c) To continue balanced development of the economic resources, to increase long-term oil revenue and to preserve the depleting resources;
 - (d) To minimize dependence on the export of oil as the principal source of revenue;
 - (e) To develop manpower in education and training and to raise the general health standard; and
 - (f) To complete the necessary infrastructure to realize the general objectives.
- (2) Following an economic policy that diversifies the economic base by using the major portion of capitals and manpower in the productive sectors, such as agriculture, industry and mining.
- (3) Drafting a policy for the development of manpower in a positive manner, considering that the third plan strategy aims at reducing alien labor. The policy envisages the growth of Saudi manpower in five years and to encourage them to work in those sectors that guarantee high productivity.
- (4) As it may be extremely difficult to find a large number of Saudi nationals actually joining work in required departments, the policy will be reviewed periodically to check the wages from rising in such a way as to affect the level of inflation or the interests of Saudi Arabians in capital or labor.
- (5) To minimize the volume of investments used in the infrastructures and to concentrate on the infrastructures and other facilities in the areas which can support productive projects, and to resist from scattering the resources in establishing or supporting such places that do not have the components of development.
- (6) To follow a fiscal and monetary policy that enables to achieve the planned growth rate of the various sectors with control over inflation.
- (7) To preserve the national capital by ensuring and supporting the programs of maintenance.
- (8) To introduce basic changes in the present government system, to develop the method of work in such a way as to derive maximum advantage from the available manpower and to ensure a better standard of performance in conformity with the role of the government machinery in the realization of the plan's objectives.
- (9) To educate the people on the objectives and requirements of development through social programs, so they can help in the achievements of the goals of development.
- (10) To follow an oil and gas production policy that ensures the preservation of this national wealth for a long time and to use the produced quantity in such a way as to give increased value as much as possible.

S. Yemen chief invited to Kingdom

JEDDAH, May 5 (SPA) — King Khaled has extended an invitation to South Yemeni President Ali Nasser Muhammad to visit Saudi Arabia, the country's Defense Minister Prince Sultan said Monday.

Prince Sultan, who inspected King Faisal Naval Base here made the statement at the same time North Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Salch denied that there are any differences between his country and Saudi Arabia.

On the aborted American military operation in Iran to rescue 50 Americans held hostage at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, the prince, who is also the minister of aviation, reiterated the Kingdom's official statement that the Saudi Arabian people denounce the operation. "We call for understanding which is in the area's interest," he said.

World prepares farewell to mourned by Yugoslavs

BELGRADE, May 5 (AFP) — As the presidential train slowly and ceremoniously carried the body of 87-year-old Yugoslav President Josip Broz Tito to the site of his resting place overlooking the capital, his trysting grief was evident Monday throughout the federation he forged.

Meanwhile, world leaders prepared to pay tribute to the late leader with several cancelling visits to attend the Thursday funeral of a veteran leader who died Sunday.

Black-bordered portraits appeared Monday in shop windows, polished by solemn and women to show their leader of 35 years off to best effect. In every ministry, or officials were in mourning black, while men who turned up for lessons were dressed in black.

A moving ceremony in Zagreb, a vast crowd watched six senior officers in full dress uniform carry the coffin from the train to the station square, where a leading official of this second-largest of the six Yugoslav republics recalled that it was here that Josip Broz Tito — the son of a Croatian blacksmith — began his revolutionary career in the 1920's.

As officials, led by Tito's sons, Zarko and Misha, paid their respects, the speaker described the president's "historic role" to Josef Stalin in 1948 as "one of the most significant moments in the building of equal relations between Communist parties and socialist nations."

Pakistani President Gen. Mohammed Zia Ul-Haq on a state visit to Communist China, has cancelled a trip to Pyongyang to attend the state funeral, while Cypriot President Spyros Kyprianou has officially postponed medical treatment in London and Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira is to cut short a Canadian tour to fly to Belgrade.

In Peking, it was officially announced that Communist party Chairman Hua Guofeng was leaving for the Yugoslav capital Tuesday. The Chinese media announced the Yugoslav leader's death immediately Sunday, later publishing a message to the Yugoslav government expressing China's "immense grief" and making no mention of the rift which split the two nations from 1956 to 1977.

In Moscow, the Soviet delegation had not yet been announced and a foreign ministry spokesman confirmed Monday that the Kremlin had not yet sent any message of sympathy. In Belgrade, a reliable East European source reported it was "unlikely" Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev would attend the funeral.

It was announced earlier in Washington that United States President Jimmy Carter would not be going to Belgrade, reportedly to avoid meeting Brezhnev at a time U.S. Soviet relations are heavily strained.

But around the world, sovereigns, princes and presidents have announced they will be in the Yugoslav capital to bid farewell to the man Indian President Sanjiva Reddy described as a "statesman of vision and imagination, a true patriot and a valiant fighter for freedom."

London captors free 5th hostage

LONDON, May 5 (R) — A siege of the Iranian embassy in London was in its sixth day Monday and police, after talking again to gunmen holding about 20 hostages, expressed rising hopes for a peaceful outcome.

"We are encouraged," a police spokesman said. "We have got five hostages out, we're still talking and the hostage-takers are cool, calculated."

Syrian journalist Mustafa Karkouti, 37, who works for the Beirut daily As-Safir, became the fifth captive to be released late Sunday night who, suffering from a stomach complaint, staggered into the street.

Britain's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Hurd, seeking the help of Arab diplomats in an attempt to break the deadlock, Monday had discussions with Jordanian ambassador Ibrahim Izziddin.

Up to five gunmen, who seized the embassy last Wednesday, have demanded that Arab envoys take part in negotiations for a peaceful end to the siege. The gunmen have denounced what they call oppression in Iran's largely Arabic-speaking province of Khuzestan, but have not renewed their original demands for release of 91 prisoners there.

A police spokesman said Monday afternoon: "The dialogue has been continuing on and off during the day." Police offered to send food into the embassy, but the gunmen refused it. Only three meals have been delivered since the siege began last Wednesday.

The gunmen released their first hostage, a woman secretary, only hours after seizing the embassy. Two days later they released a British journalist who had been trapped while applying for an Iranian visa. Another Iranian woman secretary, and a Pakistani, were freed over the weekend.

Iran hands over American bodies

TEHRAN, May 5 (Agencies) — The bodies of eight American servicemen who died in the abortive commando raid on Iran were handed over Monday to a representative of Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capucci. Officials at Tehran's city morgue, where the bodies have been held since April 28 after being returned from the central Iranian desert left with the bodies for Mebrabad International Airport.

The American hostages in Iran probably will be tried in Tehran by an international tribunal if the United States does not meet Iranian demands, Interior Minister Ayatollah Mahdavi Kani says.

Kani said in an interview with the Tehran newspaper Kayhan Monday the Majlis, or Iranian Parliament, will decide the hostages' fate. But if Iranian demands are not met, the hostages would likely be tried here and international representatives would be invited to participate.

Choi, South Korea president, to visit Kingdom

RIYADH, May 5 (Agencies) — The President of South Korea Choi Kyu-Hah will visit Saudi Arabia from May 11 to May 13 at the invitation of King Khaled, it was announced here Monday.

Choi will be accompanied by his foreign minister and other members of the cabinet as well as senior officials of the government.

The two leaders will hold talks on the current international situation and matters of mutual interest. They will discuss ways of further strengthening relations and cooperation.

Choi assumed the top post in South Korea following the assassination of longtime President Park Chung-Hee last October.

Hughes Corporation removed from boycott list

AMMAN, May 5 (AP) — The Arab Boycott Office has decided to remove from its blacklist the name of the U.S. Hughes Corporation, to clear the way for its participation in bidding for the Arab telecommunication satellite project, officials said here.

The office sets rules on boycotting foreign firms that deal with Israel.

Representatives of Arab League member states attended a meeting here and decided last Wednesday to "resolve the dilemma facing the Arabsat committee" by de-blacklisting the American firm, the same officials said.

Only one "feasible bid" for the $100 million Arabsat project came from a West European consortium led by British Aerospace Corporation.

Algoasibi tells Arab-Americans Kingdom a unique democracy

WASHINGTON, May 5 (SPA) — Saudi Arabia has shunned both capitalism and socialism, but made use of some of the best features of both systems to come out with a happy blend that is good for its people, Dr. Ghazi Algoasibi, minister of industry and electricity said.

Addressing the National Association of Arab-Americans here last Saturday, Algoasibi said that the Kingdom enjoys a system of free enterprise, which is the major advantage of capitalism. At the same time, the state intervenes to promote social services as is the case in socialist systems.

Saudi Arabia has a democratic system that distinguishes it from any other country, the minister said. Its democracy and march towards development and scientific research, which began some 30 years ago, are inti-

The first girls' school was opened in 1960; now there are 3,000 girls' schools. In less than five years, more than 2,000 villages were electrified; 15,000 kilometers of road were surfaced, more than 700,000 telephone sets were installed, and more than 300,000 housing units were erected. The largest industrial complex in the world — the gas liquefaction project — is nearing completion, and the Jubail and Yanbu petrochemical scheme is about to go into operation, Algoasibi said.

The official ridiculed foreign reporting of the seizure of the Meccan Haram by a group of fanatics at the beginning of the new Hijra year. "When I was in the United States and saw their coverage, I read so many versions that I thought I was reading science fiction books. Therefore I wouldn't be surprised if after a while I read that a Saudi official has finally admitted the truth: it was a conspiracy, an invasion attempt from outer-space," he said.

"Anyhow, the future of Saudi Arabia depends on fishermen in the Red Sea, farmers in Al-Qasim, and businessmen in Al-Khobar, not on speculations and prophecies by journalists with most unreliable sources," he added.

But, he said, ignorance is not the only reason for the attack Saudi Arabia is subjected to on the part of foreign media. If it (Saudi Arabia) adopts a sentimental stand towards the Egyptian-Israeli romantic story, many a foreign writer and politician would adopt a cordial attitude towards Saudi Arabia, Algoasibi joked.

He asserted that the prime objective of Saudi Arabia's foreign policy was the establishment of peace in the Middle East, but a peace based on justice, otherwise it would be meaningless, he said.

That we call it nationalism, communism or Camp Davidism, occupation is occupation, even if we label it autonomy. We must call a spade a spade, he added. Self-rule means that while the colonialist state enjoys sovereignty, the citizens are allowed to look after their own gardens, set up their own sewage systems, and collect their own traffic tickets — What a generosity! " he said.

He said there are now more than 150 independent states in the world, some of them with less than 100,000 inhabitants on a few kilometers area. The racist hypothesis that solely the Palestinians, unlike all the other peoples of the world, cannot live without the tutelage of retired terrorists with harmful thoughts cannot stand, because it is politically non viable. For peace to be established, a choice must be made between the grant of independence to Palestinians and more wars. One has to choose between land and peace, Algoasibi concluded.

Telephone company expands international dialing service

By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, May 5 — Saudi Telephone's International Subscriber dialing is now available to all subscribers, residences and businesses, sources reported Monday.

Saudi Telephone subscribers are receiving application forms for international subscriber dialing with the first quarter invoices currently being distributed. There is no charge for connecting the service and no minimum international calling requirement, a company spokesman said.

He added that subscribers who wish to have "OO" dialing connected to their telephone lines, need only to fill out this application form and bring it with them to the Saudi Telephone payment office when they pay their accounts. The payment office attendant will accept the application and the service will be connected within a short period of time.

International subscriber dialing allows subscribers to place international calls without the assistance of an operator to more than 70 countries in Saudi Telephone's ISD network. Normal long distance rates apply for the calls.

The number of international subscribers now stands at 17,250 with the majority in Riyadh, 8,550; Jeddah, 4,500 and 2,600 in Dammam and Hofuf. In 1979 the total number of subscribers totaled 590.

The number of international calls for the first quarter was 2.3 million or an average 25,500 — double the number of calls made during the first quarter of last year. The top three countries to which calls were made are the United Kingdom with 2,682 calls per day, the United States with 2,669 calls per day and Egypt with 1,400 calls. The billable value of international calls last quarter of 1980 was SR186 million while in the same period last year it was SR71 million.

Research exchange discussed Qatar educators visit Dhahran

DAMMAM, May 5 (SPA) — A Qatari educational delegation arrived in Dhahran Monday on a short visit to the Eastern Province during which the delegation held talks with Dr. Muhammad Said Qahtani, rector of King Faisal University of Dammam.

The delegation, representing the University of Qatar, visited the Faculty of Medicine and Medical Sciences and the Faculty of Architecture and Planning of King Faisal University.

During its meeting with Dr. Qahtani, the delegation discussed educational, administrative, and technical issues related to university work. The talks also covered exchange of research and experts between the two universities. The Qatari delegation comprises Kamal Abbas Naji, chancellor of relations of the Qatar ministry of education, Prof. Ahmad Khairi Kazem, technical advisor for UNESCO and director of the project of the university of Qatar.

The delegation was to leave later evening after the one-day visit.

Meanwhile, King Faisal University is engaged in a recreational project for the city at the Nisf Al-Qamar beach in Azh Al Khobar. The project will have two houses for individuals and families and facilities.

THE SAUDI PUBLIC TRANSPORT COMPANY

announces that it has started City Bus services in TAIF in the near future.

The Chairman and Members of the Board of the Saudi Public Transport Company are pleased to announce the operation of its Taif Bus Service in the near future.

Superbly designed comfortable buses for inter and intra-city transportation were imported and put in service in Al-Riyadh and Holy Mecca, and 8 out of 11 planned routes are also operating in Jeddah.

One of the advantages of these buses is the partition which separates ladies from men, which adds to their privacy, comfort and security.

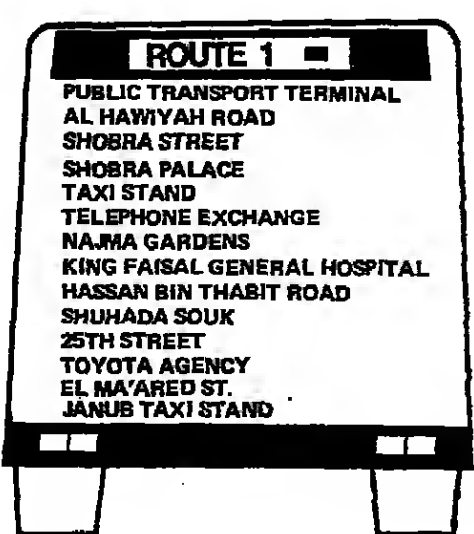

The operation of these buses will be regular and according to a fixed schedule. Buses will stop only at Bus Stops determined in coordination with the Taif traffic authorities. Bus stops were so chosen that seventy percent of Taif population will find the nearest stop within half a kilometer or a five minutes walk of their homes.

To mark the occasion the Saudi Public Transport Company offers a one day free service on the starting date. This will enable the public to participate and judge for themselves.

Taking the public welfare into consideration the bus fare will be one riyal, any distance.

For more information about the company and the routes please contact: 63195 between 6-9 p.m. except Thursdays and Fridays.

*The Buses will operate seven days a week from 6.00 a.m. until 10.00 p.m.

Sports on agenda

Group highlights youth development

TUNIS, May 5 (SPA) — The president of youth welfare, Prince Faisal ibn Fahd, arrived here Sunday to attend meetings of the Executive Bureau of Council of Arab Youth Ministers that opened Monday.

Prince Faisal was received at the airport by the Tunisian minister of youth and sports, Jedd Zaggel, Asad Al-Asad, assistant general secretary of the Arab League, Sheikh Abdul Rahman Al-Umran, Kingdom's ambassador to Tunisia and the permanent delegate to the Arab League and other Tunisian officials.

Prince Faisal said that one of the most important issues on the agenda is the Arab and for sport installments and activities that forms the foundation stone for the development of Arab youths.

He said he hoped the council would approve the new policy of the fund and that the member-states would fulfil their commitments to enable the fund carry on its programs.

Prince Faisal praised the activities of the Arab League to develop and improve Arab youths. He said the third five-year development plan will give priority to youth development programs.

Prince Faisal and Heddi Zaggel will hold talks on promoting sports cooperation between the Kingdom and Tunisia.

In the meantime, Prince Abdul Mohsen ibn Jiluwi, governor of the Eastern Province Sunday opened the covered games hall of the General Presidency of Youth Welfare in Alkhobar.

After the dedication ceremony, a basketball match was played between the Saudi Arabian national team and the visiting Indian basketball team. The Kingdom's team won the game with 98 points in its favor 93 points were scored by the visitors.

Prince Abdul Mohsen presented a shield to the Indian team and received two memorial gifts from the Saudi Arabian Basketball Union and the captain of the Indian team.

Folklore festival lures princes and poets

By Yousuf Al-Khidhri

RIYADH, May 5 — The Riyadh University's fourth annual Folklore Festival opened at the grounds of the University's new campus on the Dar'iyah Road.

In attendance were Prince Salman ibn Abdul Aziz, governor of Riyadh, and a group about two thousand dignitaries and guests. The festival is organized by the Arabic Language Department of the College of Arts to draw attention on the rich variety of traditional lore that comprises the Kingdom's vernacular cultural heritage.

After a brief word of welcome by the festival's director, Dr. Abdul Aziz Nasir Al-Mari, poets offered their works which ranged in topic from thanks to the Royal Family for its benevolent leadership to the problems wrought upon the Arab homeland. Next, the Najdi folklore troupe presented an energetic display of lyrical poetry which was delivered responsively by colorfully-dressed performers arranged in two lines situated facing each other, of about fifty members each.

Between the lines musicians whirled and danced as they pounded the drum rhythm that accompanied the poetry. Weaving among and around the musicians were individual dancers wearing gold khanjars (daggers) and brandishing swords. The highlight of the evening took place when Prince Salman was given a sword and joined the dancers on the stage. Shortly thereafter Dr. Mansour Al-Turki, Rector of the University, accompanied him as did a number of other dignitaries.

The traditional Arab meal featuring large trays heaped with rice topped with chunks of boiled lamb followed, and meal was shared by all of the two thousand guests enhanced the feeling of fraternity which the occasion had generated. More poetry and dancing followed the meal, performed by troupes from Asir and the Eastern Province.

OPENING: Dr. Abdullah Nassif, rector of King Abdul Aziz University in Jeddah, dedicated the exhibition of the Faculty of Sciences at the university.

Saudi Arabia opens clinic in N. Yemen

SANAA, May 5 (SPA) — Rihab Al-Qamar, a clinic built and run by Saudi Arabia, was opened here Sunday. The Kingdom has built eight clinics, of which it is operating six. A clinic and a health unit are under construction.

The North Yemen deputy minister of health, Dr. Ahmad Akhdar, thanked the Kingdom for the assistance it provided to his country in health. The commander of Ab region also praised Saudi Arabia's participation in the development projects of North Yemen.

The director of the Saudi Arabian Projects in Yemen, Abdul Aziz ibn Khamis, said that the Kingdom has participated in building two hospitals in Saada and Baida. The hospital of Saada will be opened shortly, while a tender for equipping the other hospital is to be issued in two months.

A tender for building a third hospital will also be issued soon, he added.

Meanwhile, a Saudi Arabian delegation representing the Kingdom's universities arrived here Monday and met with the rector and staff of the University of Sanaa. They discussed promoting cooperation and exchange of experts between Saudi Arabian universities and the University of Sanaa.

The delegation is here for a five day visit.

Saudi Comment

By Tal'at Wafa

Al Riyadh

Although the recently concluded Traffic Week in the Kingdom was a good step, but it had some negative factors. In discussing them here I wish to advance an objective and constructive criticism of the matter.

Everywhere in the world, there is a speed limit for motor traffic in the city and beyond its limits, but is almost extinct in our towns. That means the drivers feel the liberty of going as fast as they can, causing irreparable loss to the public, even fatal accidents.

I feel the country's expressways must have speed limits, which should not only be publicized through the media but must also be enforced by the highway patrol. In this way, we can ensure safety to public life on the roads.

Another phenomenon that can only be tackled through a strict traffic rule is the entry of heavy trucks into the congested area of the town at any hour of day and night. Their movement creates traffic confusion and provides a permanent source of disturbance for the residents.

It is true that we are at the threshold of a colossal development plan that will require men and heavy equipment. All these necessitate the use of heavy vehicles for their transportation to the project sites which are sometimes situated within the city limits. Therefore, it becomes extremely difficult to prohibit the movement of trucks in the midst of the town.

However, this problem can be solved if specific timings are provided for the entry of trucks into towns or, better still, some roads are reserved for their movement. On congested roads, for instance, the trucks should be allowed to enter only after 11 o'clock in the evening. In other cases, parking areas for trucks could be provided outside the town precincts, from where they can enter at a time when the traffic movement is found easy within the town limits.

Autonomy talks suspended

HERZLIYA, Israel, May 5 (AP) — Negotiations on West Bank and Gaza autonomy continue to mark time, committee work having been suspended Monday at the request of Egypt's delegation.

The head of Israel's delegation, Dr. Yossef Burg, confirmed the halt at the end of morning meetings but refused to confirm rumors according to which the Egyptians link resumption of the talks to progress on the question of security.

The rumors persist, however, security remaining the major stumbling block of the talks, particularly in the wake of Friday's attack on a group of Jewish settlers in Hebron. The gun and grenade attack, which left six persons dead and 16 wounded, has hardened attitude toward the security issue.

Sources close to the Israeli delegates said Monday that they are less disposed than ever to accept interference in the security issue.

Observers say that only the smallest Israeli concessions can be expected, on such issues as internal municipal police, but no one can predict the reaction in Egypt's delegation, which considers security the prime problem. During the waiting period, negotiations will continue in informal conversations between delegation heads as well as at ministerial and delegation levels.

Zia's talks in China 'successful'

PEKING, May 5 (AP) — Pakistani President Muhammad Zia ul-Haq said Monday his talks with Chinese leaders have been "very pleasant" and "very successful."

Talking to reporters at a reception at the Pakistan embassy, Zia declined to elaborate on the talks until they are concluded.

One more round of talks had been scheduled with senior Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping, but Pakistani officials said Monday that Zia will cut short his official visit so that he can attend the funeral of Yugoslav President Tito who died Sunday.

Zia, who arrived three days ago, originally was to have stayed in China until Friday and then visited North Korea for two days. His original schedule included a two-day visit to scenic Guilin in South China.

So far, he has held two rounds of talks with Deng and one with Hua.

A Pakistani official accompanying Zia said the two sides' views have been identical on all important matters.

"The official, who asked not to be named, said there was no fixed agenda for the talks because the two countries have 'a level of friendship where we don't have to follow fixed parameters.'"

Zia and Chinese leaders had covered all questions of mutual interest, with particular reference to the regional situation, he said. This included the situation in Afghanistan and Iran, he added.

Both Pakistan and China have criticized the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan as an indication of Soviet expansionism. China also has warned that worsening Iran-U.S. relations could create an opportunity for the Soviet Union to try to intervene there.

In a banquet speech Friday night, Hua said China would stand firmly by Pakistan against foreign aggression and interference. Pakistan and China both border Afghanistan.

Zia also told reporters Monday Tito's death was a great loss to world statesmanship. He called Tito the father of the nonaligned movement and said he had been a great friend of Pakistan.

Pakistan denies plan for N-test

ISLAMABAD, May 5 (AP) — Pakistan has denied Soviet and Afghan reports that it plans to test nuclear weapons in China.

A government spokesman described as "misleading" the reports by the state-owned radio Kabul and radio Moscow that Pakistani President Zia ul-Haq is expected to discuss with the Chinese leaders the question of testing Pakistan's nuclear weapons in China.

Calling the radio broadcasts "concocted reports," the spokesman said "Pakistan has repeatedly stated that its nuclear program is entirely for peaceful purpose and has no intention of making nuclear weapons."

'Legitimate response to occupation'

Arafat defends commando raid

BONN, April 5 (R) — Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat was quoted in an interview Monday as saying the Palestinian commando raid last week on the West Bank town of Hebron was a legitimate response to foreign occupation.

The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) chief was answering questions by the West German magazine Stern, which suggested that attacks on civilians only diminished international sympathy for the Palestinians.

"Hebron was a legitimate act of resistance to foreign occupiers who have seized the land, driven away its inhabitants and trampled on the religious and cultural values of our people," he said.

Arafat said Jewish settlers belonging to the Ultra nationalist Gush Emunim Movement wanted to turn Hebron into a Jewish town.

"And what do the Israelis do to our civilians in Lebanon? But you do not like writing about murders committed against us," he said.

Arafat spoke to Stern in Beirut before and after Friday's attack, in which five Zionist settlers were killed.

Arafat said that if he was to be considered a terrorist then so were the late French President Charles de Gaulle, who fought the Germans, and the first American president, George Washington, who fought the British.

"I would like to remind you of the United Nations resolution which gives oppressed peoples the rights to use political, economic, and military means against their occupiers," he said.

Asked if the international crisis over Afghanistan and Iran would be made more acute by a breakdown of the Egyptian-Israeli talks on Palestinian autonomy, Arafat predicted the situation would "explode."

"We shall let actions speak for themselves. I can say only that there will be no quietening in the Middle East without a solution of the Palestinian question," he said.

Aden aide links improving ties with Oman to U.S. bases

BEIRUT, May 5 (R) — A South Yemeni leader said Monday that his country's relations with neighboring Oman could never improve so long as the Gulf state provided military facilities to the Americans.

Abdul-Aziz Abdul Wali told a Beirut press conference: "There can be no rapprochement with Oman unless it changes its policy on U.S. bases."

But he denied that the establishment of diplomatic relations last month between Aden and Tehran was aimed principally against Oman.

South Yemen and Iran were on the opposite sides of a war in the Oman province of Dhofar in the mid-1970's when the Shah sent Iranian troops to help defeat leftist insurrection there that was supported by Aden.

Iran and South Yemen agreed to open diplomatic relations on April 23.

Abdul-Wali, a former industry minister who is now a politburo member and secretary of the central committee of the ruling Yemeni Socialist Party said the recent change in the country's leadership did not mean a change in its policies.

He reiterated a government statement that former President Abdul-Fattah Ismail, who resigned on April 21, stepped down for health reasons.

Abdul-Wali is visiting Lebanon as part of South Yemeni moves to inform Arab leaders about developments in the country, which lies on the strategic tip of the Arabian peninsula.

Saddam Hussein says Iraq army to defend Arabs

BAGHDAD, May 5 (R) — President Saddam Hussein has said that the Iraqi army was the army of every Arab country defending its land, the Iraqi News Agency (INA) reported.

Speaking at a ceremony in Baghdad Sunday, he said: "Iraqi troops are soldiers with a mission. They have a basic mission of being the standard-bearer vanguard just as the Islamic army did when it reached China and Spain."

"We mean adherence to the spirit which enabled the first Muslims to achieve their great mission on behalf of Heaven on earth. Whoever opposes the new Arabism definitely stands against Islam however he tries to cover this up," Saddam Hussein added.

In another development, INA said that Iraq has set up 56 committees to supervise its first general election in 20 years on June 20. Iraq has had no parliament since 1958, when the monarchy was overthrown.

Rebels claim killing 136 Ethiopian troops

ROME, May 5 (AP) — A rebel group fighting in Ethiopia's mountainous northern province of Tigray claimed Sunday it killed 136 Ethiopian army soldiers in two battles last week.

The Rome office of the Tigray People's Liberation Front (TPLF), which has links to rebels fighting in the neighboring coastal province of Eritrea, said in a statement that its guerrillas killed 96 Ethiopian soldiers and captured 723 in a clash April 30 about 50 kilometers south of the ancient city of Makale.

The statement also said that the rebels killed 40 Ethiopian soldiers, wounded 100 and captured 30 in a clash in the southern part of Tigray on May 1.

THE TELEPHONE THAT SAYS "HELLO" in 80 DIFFERENT WAYS

Is your telephone system more hindrance than help? Do you waste hours of valuable time trying to make phone calls?

With the New Electronic Automatic Exchange from NEC of Japan (we call it the NEAX!) you get a telephone system that works for YOU. Up to 80 different features, all of them automatic, are available to meet your specific requirements — the touch of a button.

- If a line is engaged the NEAX will call you when it becomes free.
- The NEAX will hold a call — whether it's internal or external — whilst you make another; transfer it as required, or enable you to hold a three way conference.
- The NEAX will look after calls while you are out. It will hunt for your secretary, or automatically transfer calls to a colleague.
- The NEAX will remember 50 often used phone numbers and dial them automatically when required.
- The NEAX will keep a record of every call made, who made it and how much it cost.
- The NEAX can even regulate your phone bills by preventing unauthorised employees from making long distance or international calls.
- And much, much more. Remember, the NEAX is completely silent and ultra reliable, and takes up only a quarter of the space of a conventional telephone exchange, capacities available from 20 to 12,000 lines.

Japanese climbs Everest from China-Tibet side

TOKYO, May 5 (AP) — A Japanese mountaineer Saturday became the first non-Chinese ever to reach the pinnacle of Mount Everest from the Tibetan north slope route, the daily Yomiuri Shimbun said Sunday.

Yasuo Kato, 31, conquered the 7,848-meter (25,758-foot) summit of the earth's highest mountain after a 12-hour assault from the seventh and last base camp at 8,250 meters, the newspaper, co-sponsor of the climb with the Japan Mountaineering Association, said.

Kato, a member of a 9-man Japanese climbing expedition which began its assault on the mountain in early March, made the final ascent alone after co-climber Susumu Makamura exhausted his strength several hundred meters from the peak, it said.

The Japanese climber planted the flag of Japan, China and Nepal and buried in the snow with prayers the photos of three Chinese climbers who were killed in an avalanche during a preparatory expedition for the Japanese team last fall. He stayed on the peak 10 minutes.

The Japanese are the first foreign climbers allowed an attempt on Everest — called Chomolungma in Tibetan and Chinese — from the Tibetan side since the People's Republic was established in 1949. Two Chinese expeditions previously have conquered Everest, situated on the Nepal-China border, from Tibet.

Kato also became the first mountaineer to reach the peak two times, from both the Nepalese and Tibet-China sides. He made his first successful assault in autumn 1973, suffering a serious case of frostbite on his descent. Kato had to undergo amputation of all his toes and three fingers of his right hand.

Friday, another member of the first assault group, Akira Ube, 31, was huried in an avalanche and apparently killed at about the 8,000-meter mark.

The Japanese expedition took the same route as that taken in June 1924 by famed British climber George Leigh Mallory, who disappeared near the summit. One of the Chinese climbers killed in the expeditionary climb last fall told the Japanese that he had found "the body of an Englishman" above the 8,000-meter point, but the Mountaineering Association said it had no information as to whether Kato's team had spotted Mallory's remains.

It has been reported that Mallory may have been carrying a camera with film proving he reached the world's highest peak 29 years before Sir Edmund Hillary and the Sherpa Tenzing Norgay expedition in 1953.

Strange wins Houston Open

HOUSTON, May 5 (AP) — Curtis Strange rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt on the first sudden death hole and beat Lee Trevino for the title in the Houston Open golf tournament Sunday.

Strange, 25, went leaping into the air after his putt found the cup on the 178-yard 15th hole at the Woodlands Country Club course. The putt came on the first hole of a playoff that was forced when Trevino's magnificent, 6-under-par 65 had tied the front-running Strange at the end of the regulation 72 holes.

Strange, who had taken a 6-stroke lead with a 195 for the first three rounds — the lowest 94-hole total in 10 years of Professional Golf Association tour activity — could do no better than a round of par 71 for the last 18 holes.

Trevino, now a disappointed runner-up for the second time in two weeks, the pressure on with his 62-under-par effort and got a 266 total, 18 under par, on the board first.

He watched as Strange struggled for the par he had to have to salvage a tie from what once appeared to be an unbeatable lead. That set them to the playoff. Trevino hit first and put his drive some 25 feet from the flag, dropping quietly in the windless, muggy Texas heat. Strange put a 7-iron shot 12 feet away.

Connors routs McEnroe

DALLAS, May 5 (AP) — Jimmy Connors ran the younger John McEnroe ragged Sunday to earn the $100,000 first prize in the World Championship of Tennis finals, with a come-from-behind 2-6, 7-6, 6-1, 6-2 victory.

The No. 3-ranked Connors, seeking to take away McEnroe's No. 2 seeding in the world, broke the defending champion's service five straight times to turn a tense duel into a rout.

The 28-year-old Connors, egged on by the crowd of some 15,000 in Reunion Arena, dominated the 21-year-old McEnroe after the first set.

He won the second-set tiebreaker 7-4 after McEnroe had a brief spat with umpire Zeno Pfau over a call.

McEnroe, who plays a serve-and-rolley game, unexpectedly lost control at the start of the third set. With McEnroe harried by double faults, Connors broke service three times in the third set.

McEnroe finally ended the streak when he held service in the fifth game of the fourth set. His second-place finish earned him $40,000.

Connors was at his brilliant best in breaking McEnroe's service in the seventh game of the fourth set. He hit two winners: one off McEnroe's forehand, the other a backhand that brought the crowd to its feet with a standing ovation.

Joining Ken Rosewall as only the second two-time winner of this 10-year-old event, Connors broke McEnroe's service in the first and third games of the fourth set.

Connors said he was in better physical condition than last year: despite weighing 10 pounds more. He chased McEnroe all over the court and never seemed to tire.

In the tiebreaker, McEnroe gave Connors five of the seven points with errors on sloppy ground strokes. The victory extended Connors' lifetime record over McEnroe to 10-4.

Velez pops four homers to tie record

NEW YORK, May 5 (AP) — Ott Velez smashed four home runs to tie an American League record and lead the Toronto Blue Jays to a 9-8, 7-2 doubleheader sweep over the Cleveland Indians Sunday.

Velez hit three homers, including a grand slam and a game-winning 10th-inning solo homer that gave the Blue Jays their first game victory. In the second game, a three-run homer gave Toronto's designated hitter 10 runs batted in for the day.

His homers tied him with 10 other AL players who have hit four homers in a doubleheader. Toronto reliever Tom Buskey picked up his second victory in as many decisions in the opener. Jesse Jefferson evaded his record at 1-1 in the second game, going 5-2 in innings before needing relief help from Jerry Garvin and Joey McLaughlin, who picked up his second save.

Elsewhere in the American League, Robin Yount's grand slam home run highlighted a six-run eighth inning, and Jim Slaton and three other pitchers combined for a four-hitter to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to an 11-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Darrell Porter drove in three runs and scored a fourth in his second appearance of the season, leading the Kansas City Royals to a 5-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Reggie Jackson, knocked down by an apparent brushback pitch for the third game in a row, retaliated with a home run, then triggered a six-run fourth inning with a leadoff single, sparking the New York Yankees to a 10-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Detroit's Milt Wilcox hurled a four-hitter to pace the Tigers over the Oakland A's 4-0 in the first game of a doubleheader. Oakland's Mike Norris matched that performance with a four-hit 1-0 shutout in the nightcap to give the A's a split of their twin-bill.

Carey Lansford doubled twice, driving in two runs and scoring one himself, as the California Angels posted a 4-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Darrel Thomas scored in the ninth inning on a bases-loaded passed ball and Rookie Mickey Hatcher doubled across two more runs as the Los Angeles Dodgers blew a nine-run lead and came back to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 12-10.

In other National League action, Ken Forsch gained his fourth straight victory and contributed a double and RBI single to the Houston Astros as the Astros beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-2.

Willie Stargell and Dave Parker each drove in three runs to lead the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 13-4 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Cesar Geronimo's first home run of the season helped the Cincinnati Reds snap a five-game losing streak and defeat the Chicago Cubs 3-2 in the first game of a doubleheader. Junior Kennedy's first career grand slam home run powered the Reds to a 5-4 victory over the Cubs in the second game.

Jack Clark knocked in three runs and Terry Whitfield doubled home a pair as the San Francisco Giants defeated the Montreal Expos 8-4 in the first game of a doubleheader. Andre Dawson's infield single scored Rowland Office with the go-ahead run in a four-run seventh inning as the Expos came back to beat the Giants 6-4 in the second game.

Joel Youngblood booted Dave Winfield's eighth-inning single to right field, allowing Gene Richards to score the winning run as the San Diego Padres defeated the New York Mets 4-3 in the first game of a twinbill. Elliot Maddox keyed a three-run second inning with a bases-loaded single to help New York beat San Diego 6-2 for a split of their doubleheader.

The legacy of Tito

By Robert Stephens

President Tito was for more than 35 years the leader of a relatively small country of modest resources but he was a giant among the world statesmen of the postwar era.

His influence was felt far beyond the frontiers of Yugoslavia, indeed throughout the globe. This was not merely because of his legendary role as a daring partisan leader in World War II or because of his forceful colorful personality. It was primarily because he was a pioneer in actions and ideas which helped to shape world politics over several decades.

Tito's first and perhaps greatest achievement was to break the mold of a monolithic world Communist movement which Stalin tried to keep under Moscow's control. His defiance of Stalin in 1948 asserted Yugoslavia's national independence without abandoning his Communist convictions. He paved the way which other Communist states and later other nongoverning Communist parties in the West were to follow.

Although the attempts of Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia to achieve greater independence from Moscow were brutally repressed by the Soviet Red Army, the influence of the Titoist heresy continued to be felt and probably helped to give the East European regimes more freedom of maneuver.

This was most evident in the case of Romania which developed an independent line in foreign policy, while Ho Chi Minh's Vietnam also seemed to profit from Tito's example.

And then, of course, there was the other great schism — between Communist China and the Soviet Union — although this time it was not, as in Tito's case, like Luther breaking with Rome but more like a quarrel between rival popes. For Mao claimed Stalin's mantle of Communist leadership and Tito backed the coexistence policies of Khrushchev and his successors in the Kremlin.

The breach which developed between Belgrade and Peking was not finally healed until the post-Mao visit of Chairman Hua to Yugoslavia in 1978.

Tito's other great contribution to world politics was his share in the establishment of the doctrine and practice of nonalignment.

Yugoslavia was the only European country in the nonaligned group whose origins lay in the anti-colonial Afro-Asian front created at the Bandung conference in 1955. Under the leadership of Tito, Nehru of India, Nasser of Egypt, Sukarno of Indonesia and Nkrumah of Ghana a negative concept of neutrality was transformed into an active policy of lessening tension between the nuclear superpower blocs, promoting disarmament and extending what Nehru called the "areas of peace" — where there should be no East or West military bases or alliances.

The nonaligned movement's influence was gravely impaired by China's attack on India in 1962 but it continued to play a useful mediating role especially where the decolonization process produced violence and international tension.

By giving his support to the anti-colonial movement in Africa and Asia, Tito was also able to gain the ear of the Afro-Asian leaders for his ideas of independence, freedom from military blocs and encouragement of East-West coexistence which were more specifically the concern of Yugoslavia.

In the last few years this influence seemed to have waned, primarily because the character and cohesion of the nonaligned group also began to change with increasing conflicts between its members.

Tito's influence depended also on his ability to maintain a stable, viable political base in his own country, and in its immediate neighborhood.

Soon after his break with Moscow he settled two outstanding problems with his neighbors — the Trieste settlement with Italy and the end of active support for the Communist guerrilla rebellion in Greece.

He subsequently carried on a pragmatic policy within the Balkans which assured that traditionally contentious region of greater stability. He encouraged greater cooperation with Greece, Turkey and Romania. Only with Bulgaria was there a serious quarrel, over the Macedonian question.

The foundation of this stability lay chiefly in Tito's remarkable success in welding Yugoslavia itself into a federal multi-national state of 56 diverse republics with differences of language, religion, size and natural wealth.

Strains between the republics still exist and some see them as the biggest threat to the country's unity after Tito. The maintenance of unity is also complicated by the fact that what partly helped to keep the federation together was the balance between the centralized national power of the Communist Party and the national army on one side, and the decentralizing influence of Tito's other great political invention, "workers' self-management," on the other.

For though diluted by diversity, by a general liberalization and increased contact with the West, in the last resort power lay with Tito and the Communist Party. Occasionally, as in the imprisonment of Djilas and other dissident writers, it was ruthlessly applied. The test of what Tito built is yet to come but the collective leadership he prepared to follow him has, in what amounted to a trial run during his illness, shown a promising cool-headed efficiency. — (OFNS)

Letter to the editor

Afghan Refugee Relief Assn.

International

104-707 Hamilton St., New Westminster BC,

Canada V3M-2M7

President: Riasat Ali Khan

Vice President: Jamil Nagib

Secretary: John H. Small

Dear Sir,

We request that your newspaper announce formation of a world organization for the relief of the Afghan refugees. It is a non-profit charitable organization, set up for the express purpose of raising money and other assistance to aid the suffering and hardships of the Afghan refugees.

The aim of the Afghan Refugee Relief Association International is to supply food, shelter, medical services, and other necessary services. The association also aims to charter other chapters through the world for this humanitarian cause.

Another aim of the association is to produce a documentary film and other still photograph bringing the plight of the Afghan refugees to the world and to urge governments to supply massive aid to these people.

Permission for this documentary film has been given by the government of Pakistan through embassy in Ottawa, Canada, and we are in need of funds to make and distribute these films to television stations throughout the world. We need sponsor or donors for this purpose as well as aid to the Afghan refugees.

We also are interested in contacting people who will form chapters in their own areas and the formation of a national headquarters in their respective countries.

Also, we wish to point out that major efforts needed to set up medical facilities in Pakistan care for these people. It is expected that after summer monsoon season a major health problem will develop. Our organization's aim is to supply at least one field hospital with staff and equipment will be located at the refugee site, and it is felt this will be a long term need to avoid epidemic conditions among the refugees.

We are making an open appeal to the general public and also to governments to assist us in setting up a hospital and supplying meaningful aid to the people. Any contribution will be gratefully accepted by our organization and also by refugees.

If you want to check on the validity of our organization, contact the Embassy of Pakistan in Canada. The address is 170 Metcalf St., Ottawa, Canada K2P-1P3 phone number 613-238-7881. Contact press attaché S. Anwar Mahmood.

Our president, Riasat Ali Khan, is part president of the Pakistan Canada Association. Vice President Jamil Nagib is a well known businessman among Muslim community here and also in the Middle East. Secretary John H. Small also is well known in the Islamic community here and his wife is the governor of Sindh-Pakistan. Lt. Gen. Sa Rashid Abbasi.

The association will open offices in Pakistan soon as funding is available, in order to supply chapters with on-the-spot information and coordinate efforts with the Pakistan government and other relief organizations. We will also keep world informed of the refugees' needs.

Anyone wishing to contribute to our organization can write to suite 104, 707 Hamilton St., N. Westminster, Canada V3M-2M7 or to the Pakistan Embassy, Ottawa, Canada. Make checks payable to the Afghan Refugee Relief Association International.

Sincerely yours

Sd/- John H. Small

CREEPING ANNEXATION

When the Begin government declared its intention to establish two "religious" schools inside the Arab town of Al Khalil (Hebron), it was well aware of the enormous provocation this constituted for the Palestinians living there. The step was only a further phase in a long standing plan to absorb the town fully. Al Khalil is already ringed with Zionist settlements. Now the enemy was moving in. The inhabitants realized that they would have no option but to fight this creeping annexation with all the means available. And this is what has happened. Al Khalil is at the moment at the center of the civil insurrection engulfing the West Bank as a whole. The Palestinians under the illegal Israeli occupation know that unless they make a stand now, their fate would be like those of their folks who were uprooted from their land, and forced to spend decades in refugee camps outside.

The people of the West Bank realize utter ruthlessness of the warmachine against which they are pitting themselves. They have already had a foretaste of what is to come, when an unarmed youth taking part in a demonstration was first crippled then murdered in cold blood by an Israeli officer. Now that the Palestinian fighters have struck back, they know that the Israelis are preparing for a bloody revenge. But they also know that the whole world must be made to realize that the Palestinians on the West Bank are not a pawn in anyone's game; that here is a people intent on determining their fate, and will not rest until they do so.

It is no accident that the Israelis chose this moment, just before the "autonomy" talks with Egypt are due to conclude, to escalate their provocations to the West Bankers to the present intolerable level, leaving no choice between meek submission to creeping annexation and revolt. It is also no accident that the cat's paw in this relentless provocation is none other than Begin's own settler thugs, the mainstay of the Israeli right wing for which the ruling Likud is the representative.

The world better heed the call of the West Bank. The Palestinians there, fighting for their rightful nationhood, cannot mobilize the armies and the equipment of repression which the Israelis have at their command. But they know that if it comes to a final showdown, their stand will provide the fuse for a general explosion in the area. The international community, especially Israel's friends and supporters among it, will have the choice of either restraining the Zionists or face the consequences, military, economic and political, of a new war.

Moscow fears 'unpredictable' Carter

By Mark Frankland

MOSCOW — Behind the Soviet charge that the American attempt to free the hostages in Tehran shows U.S. policies to be "balancing on the brink of insanity" one can detect anxiety as well as a readiness to exploit President Jimmy Carter's difficulties.

It is certainly true that in recent weeks the Soviet government has done nothing to help America over the hostages. The press has increased its attacks on American policy to Iran while referring seldom if at all to the hostages as a cause of that policy.

But the extreme rapidity with which the official news agency Tass put out the official reaction last week seems to reflect Soviet unease about the entire direction of U.S.-Soviet relations.

Conversations with Soviet officials and experts here suggest that Moscow itself has adopted an extremely cautious and patient policy toward Iran. The Iranians have demanded that the Soviet Union pay an unacceptably high price for Iranian natural gas.

Russians foresee the possibility that Iran might intervene in Afghanistan, using the Afghan refugees in eastern Iran. They note that Iran has described the Soviet Union and the U.S. as superpowers equally to be distrusted.

There is, however, no sign that the Soviet Union is thinking of military intervention in Iran, although it has troops on both the Afghan-Iranian border as well as the border between the Soviet Union and Iran.

Soviet policy is rather to present a frightening picture of U.S. intentions toward Iran and the whole Middle East. Thus Tass' tough statement declared the hostages to be just a pretext for America's "aggressive and hegemonistic" policy which was trying to force Iran to kneel under to an American political and military presence in the Middle East.

Deep Soviet doubt about the drift of American strategy and about Carter himself explain the alarm that is detectable here.

It is now an axiom of Soviet thinking that America is trying to reverse the decline of U.S. power which Moscow believes has taken place over the last decade. A readiness to use force is seen as part of this. Iran, a symbol of the U.S. decline in influence, has become an object of the new American strategy.

But the American strategy, as interpreted by experts in Moscow, is global and derived from an American unwillingness to concede parity with the Soviet Union both in military strength and world political influence.

This American strategy, whose genesis Soviet experts in American affairs have tried to document in detail, would not be so worrying were it not for Russian exasperation with Carter himself.

This has now reached the stage where Carter is publicly attacked and ridiculed not only in press articles but in cartoons. Diplomats here believe this could be allowed to happen only if reflected the personal exasperation of an aging and probably now none too imaginative Soviet leadership.

The Russians simply find it hard to understand the American policy toward Iran. A very well-placed Russian enumerated to me all the damage he believed America would do to itself by the planned economic boycott of Iran. It would increase the danger to the hostages; hurt those people in Iran who wanted to improve relations with Washington; put an increased strain on America's allies, who because of their need for Iranian oil stand to suffer far more than America.

The conclusion entertained here is that Carter is perilously unpredictable and has made impossible the sort of regulated power competition that the Russians conducted with Kennedy, Johnson and Nixon.

Some Russians even argue that had Carter shown a glimmer of understanding of Russian needs in Afghanistan, he might in return have got some Soviet restraint in Iran. But, as a senior diplomat put it, the Russians "are not sure that Carter would understand any concession they might make" and fear he might use it to try to humiliate Moscow.

Added to this is the real concern here that the American election will aggravate Carter's unpredictability, and America's wish to win back old positions of strength. Experts argue that a contest between Ronald Reagan and Carter, taking place against a background of resurgent conservative feeling in America, could lead to a spiral of increasingly anti-Soviet statements from both men, with damaging results for Soviet-American relations.

Add to all this that there are few Russian officials who find it easy to understand popular American emotion about the hostages and one has a recipe at the very least for a violent escalation of hostile rhetoric between Washington and Moscow. (OFNS)

saudi press review

Most newspapers Monday led with a report on the Council of Ministers' special meeting chaired by King Khaled, the committee approved the country's third five-year development plan in which SR 782 billion was allocated for the economic sectors. Okaz highlighted in its lead story Crown Prince Fahd's statement that the previous two plans achieved their targets in record time. Al Medina led with the King's stress that the implementation of the plan is a joint responsibility and cooperation leads to sound progress. Repressive Zionist measures against Arab residents of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan and PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's reaffirmation of the Palestinians' adherence to their identity and soil formed the lead story in Al Yom newspaper.

Al Riyadh front-paged the disturbing situation in occupied Palestine where the Israeli authorities adopted unprecedented measures to get hold of the Palestinian commandos who led the Hebron operation. In a front-page story, Okaz quoted Defense and Aviation Minister Prince Sultan as saying King Khaled has renewed his invitation to the new President of South Yemen, Ali Nasser Muhammad, to pay a visit to Saudi Arabia. The Muslim World League's denunciation of the United States' hostile attitude toward the Arab and Islamic nation figured prominently in Al Yom newspaper.

Newspaper editorials mostly concerned themselves with the extraordinary session of the Council of Ministers, highlighting King Khaled's speech in which he described the new third plan as an "auspicious step toward further welfare and prosperity of our people and nation." The editorials also condemned Israel's aggressive policy and highlighted the importance of Saudi-Yemeni relations.

Commenting on the third plan, Al Jazirah said it is the first development plan attempting to change the economic structure of the country. It added that, since the state has long-term development objectives, it will require concerted joint efforts by both officials and citizens. The paper called upon both to devote themselves to the progressive task with a view to building a modern state on the basis of the teachings of Islam. The paper stressed that the third plan is the starting point for a new stage of development amid all challenges and obstacles in the way of progress. The Saudi Arabians will have to race with time in order to uphold their dignity under the sincere leadership of the country, it said.

In an editorial on the third plan, Al Riyadh said the more than SR 782 billion mark of the plan reflects the state's aspirations for development of its resources with an independent approach and with full knowledge of the dimensions of the present age. Highlighting the monarch's remarks on the joint responsibility, the paper said that officials, as well as citizens, will be called upon to exert efforts and make sacrifices for the realization of optimum production.

Dealing with the same subject, Al Nadwa said the Kingdom stands at the threshold of a new stage of strong hopes and aspirations for further progress and prosperity. The planners have successfully overcome the risks involved in the previous plans by checking the inflation, it said. The paper stressed the diversification of the productive base with a view to minimizing dependence on oil and developing manpower through intensive care for technical and vocational education.

Al Medina concentrated on Saudi-Yemeni relations, saying the two countries have demonstrated a fine example of strong bilateral relations without allowing any alien power to spoil their relations. The paper referred to the joint investment in establishing the Yemeni Airways and said the cooperation of both provides a fine example of fruitful work, which can be followed by other brotherly and neighboring states.

Okaz dwelled on the disturbing situation in the occupied West Bank and said that the firm attitude of Arab residents is proof of their revolt to any attempt on their destiny. The paper said that the illegal activities of Israel have exposed the real worth of Islam before the international community, whom it urged to put an end to Israel's irresponsible attitude that only increases tension in the region.

Al Bilad said in an editorial that the Hebron operation has impressed upon Jews that they are always within the reach of the commandos, who can implement their plans even if they are surrounded by electronic cordons from all sides. The operation has made it clear that there can be no peace without the Palestinians being given their legitimate rights.

Fine Arts Society

Jeddah artists display works

By Jacqueline Elmaleh

On Saturday night Mayor Mohammed Farsi cut the ribbon opening the annual resident international artists show at the Redec Center. Among the dignitaries present at the gala event were representatives of the Jeddah Municipality, well-known Jeddah architect Samieh Makhoul, and the Tunisian ambassador. The show is the work of fifty-two artists belonging to the Jeddah Fine Arts Society.

The Society, founded four years ago by a small group of resident artists, has a membership of more than one hundred artists and all were invited to participate. One of the unique aspects of the exhibition is that each artist had the opportunity to display their own selection of ten works. A definite advantage from the commercial point of view, it has also given a chance to the individual artist to make a personal presentation of himself to the audience.

The apparent aims of the society are "to promote communication between international artists, allowing comparison of standards and technique and encouraging creativity and inspiration." Also to "engage a cultural milieu in Jeddah." To this end the Society holds monthly lectures and talks as well as art workshops. The annual exhibition is an effort to fulfill the Society's aim and an invitation to the general public "to understand and share in them."

To put together an exhibition of work by fifty-two artists is not an easy feat under any circumstances. The task is made more difficult when the group holding the show works under a cooperative system. The main drawback of each artist having a personal say in the preparation is obvious.

However Beverly Mathis, exhibition coordinator for this year's event, has given her free time and worked hard to put some organization into the presentation of the almost 500 works at the Redec Plaza Gallery. In the first section of the Gallery are two samples of each artist's work while the upstairs galleries contain the main exhibition, divided into categories of medium — oils and acrylics, water colours, pencil, batik, beaten copper, pastels, stained glass and photography.

The disadvantage of such an arrangement is that the exhibition has more of the appearance of an art sale rather than an art show. This conclusion is confirmed by the lack of sufficient data on the artists or their work with exception to an artwork price list.

Another distracting factor created by having the work of each artist scattered throughout the Gallery is the obstacle encountered in getting a complete feel or total perspective of the individual artists' work, especially those who work in several media or mixed media.

But despite the lack of professionalism in exhibition planning and the lack of space, the fourth annual Jeddah Fine Arts Society exposition makes up in talent what it lacks in presentation.

Of the fifty-two artists represented in the show, all exhibited some artistic skill and imagination. A wide range of media, various techniques and styles have been used. A few artists were outstanding in originality and concept. Three painters falling into this category are Azeez, Patrice Bac and Peter Quidley. Azeez's colorful surreal images in acrylics and explicitly detailed pencil work suggest that art should defy reason and abandon itself to the subconscious.

Patrice Bac's paintings, too, are characterized by clear use of imagery. Of particular note is her Flamingo Roses, a composition of a crushed Pepsi tin and pink flamingos in flight, juxtapositioned on a barren sandy seascape.

The third painter, Quidley presented the most exotic yet realistic work in his study of "Eyes No. 3."

In the line of more traditional art, Tanveer Shams' oil paintings of Old Jeddah stole the show. Tanveer combines fine line and detail with intense pastel shades to almost romanticize his picture of the lofty shuttered coral block buildings of the old city core. A long time member of the art society, previously being a resident of Saudi Arabia, Shams flew from Karachi to participate in the exhibition.

Using the theme of old Jeddah, which was the most common amongst the artists, probably the best executed pencil studies were by John Horton, while David Howell produced some delicately haunting water colours.

In photography, a much less used medium, most of the work proved to be successful. Khaled Khidr's large bold color prints attracted the most attention with his traditional images of Jeddah, Old and New. But also worthy of mention was Trevor Roy Wickson's interesting black and white study Old Jeddah No. 1, and Gunmar Bernert's slide box concept The Sun Goes Up and Down.

Of the unusual media which takes craft as well as art to work in, such as beaten copper, stained glass and batik, Karen Hill's batik scenes of the Asir were successfully rendered with a skillful touch and exquisite shading.

In general the artwork displayed couldn't have been finer. That so much talent exists in Jeddah, is deserving of more cultivation. With groups like the Jeddah Fine Arts Society and the right patronage, the city is on its way to make its mark as a cultural center in the Arab world.

The annual exhibition of the J.F.A.S. is running through Thursday at the Redec Plaza Gallery in the Redec Center off Medina Road. Ladies Only 10 a.m.-1 p.m. General Public 5 p.m.-10 p.m.

The theater comes to town

Jeddah Players and Saudi Equity Theater began their production of Dale Wasserman's play "Man of La Mancha" Sunday night in the Players' Playhouse.

The musical play chronicles the plight of Miguel de Cervantes after he has been thrown in jail to await trial by inquisition.

Cervantes' tales unfold while he entertains the kangaroo court in the dungeon. Throughout the play, Cervantes (as Don Quixote) meets his dreams and failures.

The play is directed by Carrie Frye, a long-time proponent of the theater in Jeddah. The musical play begins at 8 p.m. and runs through May 8th.

QUIXOTE: Wearing the golden helmet of Mambriño, Don Quixote vows to keep up the quest of the good and pure-hearted.

Carrington defends Iran moves

NEW YORK, May 5 (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington has said that imposing economic sanctions on Iran will be a much greater sacrifice for the European allies than for the United States.

Interviewed on ABC's Issues and Answers, Carrington denied charges that European allies have not adequately supported the United States in its struggle to release American hostages held in Iran.

"The burden that we are taking in economic sanctions against Iran is infinitely greater than the burden that you have taken in cutting off trade with Iran," Carrington said.

"So you do not want to underestimate what you have asked us to do or our willingness to help you," he said.

The European allied nations have agreed to implement economic sanctions against Iran on May 17, unless "decisive progress" was made toward the release of the hostages.

Speaking about the aborted mission to rescue the hostages, Carrington said the United States was "absolutely entitled to try". But he said any further rescue effort must be judged "on the basis of whether or not it's going to be successful, whether any policy adopted by the United States and supported by U.S. friends is likely to release the hostages."

Asked if Great Britain would support such action, Carrington said: "I think we would have to be convinced that it was likely to release the hostages," adding that if he was asked Sunday whether such action would succeed, "it would be rather unlikely that that should happen."

Carrington stressed that the United States must also take into account the effect military force would have upon the other countries in the region.

On other matters, Carrington said the British government remained "wholly opposed" to its athletes taking part in the Moscow Olympics.

He said he did not believe that measures suggested Saturday by the Olympic committees of most Western European countries in Rome were "adequate." The proposals were aimed at reducing politics at the games with the hope of salvaging the summer Olympics.

"Any athletes who go are attending bogus games in which winning a gold medal means nothing if the United States is not there," he said, reiterating that to participate was "unthinkable" in light of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Trial of cultist opens in Guyana

GEORGETOWN, Guyana, May 5 (AP) — Larry Layton, a former X-ray technician of the People's Temple Medical Center, was to go on trial in this South American country Monday on five charges of murder and two counts of attempted murder.

Layton, 33, was associated with the agricultural commune of the People's Temple cult where 914 persons died in a mass-suicide murder orchestrated by self-styled Bishop Jim Jones in November 1978.

Layton is charged with murder in the deaths of U.S. Representative Leo Ryan of California, journalists Bob Brown and Don Harris of the National Broadcasting Company, and Gregory Robinson, photographer for the San Francisco Chronicle.

Layton is also accused of murdering Patricia Parks, a People's Temple defector, and of attempting to murder two other Temple defectors.

The murders allegedly took place at a small airstrip at Port Kaituma in the Guyana hinterland.

Communist China launches global search for new allies

PEKING, May 5 (LAT) — With the Soviet Union apparently becoming increasingly mired in Afghanistan, Communist China has launched a global diplomatic offensive asserting its own leadership in Asia and challenging the Russians.

In recent weeks, senior Chinese officials have fanned out on missions from Pakistan to the United States, while the Peking-backed premier of Cambodia was received in North Korea, which borders both China and the Soviet Union.

And, last month, it was announced here, the most important Communist leader in Western Europe, Italy's Enrico Berlinguer, led a Delegation to Peking in one of the Communist world's most important contacts since Moscow excommunicated the Chinese from the global movement in 1960 over ideological differences with the late Mao Tse-Tung.

China's burst of top-level diplomacy — a weeklong round of talks by ministerial-level envoys in the Philippines, Japan, Malaysia, Singapore and six African nations, as well as in Washington and Islamabad, Pakistan — seemed timed to leap over a Soviet Union distracted by world criticism of its aggression in Afghanistan and of Soviet-supported Vietnam's continuing military advances in Cambodia.

China's assessment of the situation was summarized by this commentary from the official New China News Agency: "That Moscow once again brandishes the big stick of 'internationalist duty' shows that the Kremlin is fierce of men but has dread in its heart. Since its invasion of Afghanistan, the Soviet Union has met with unprecedented strong opposition from developing nations and Western countries and found itself isolated. Even some of its 'fraternal parties' and some members of its 'community' have obviously given less than their full support to Moscow's actions and explanations."

With that statement underscoring their diplomatic harnstorming, one Chinese vice foreign minister, Zhang Wenjin, conferred with former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and others in Washington while another, Han Ninlong, consulted the Japanese foreign office in Tokyo.

Meanwhile, in the Tunisian capital of Tunis, Vice Premier Chen Muhua, the highest-ranking woman in the Chinese cabinet, headed a delegation that paid official calls to six nations of north and west Africa.

The theme being struck by Chinese diplomats was typified by Foreign Minister Huang Hua's banquet speech in Singapore: "We have entered the 1980's amid great international turbulence. 'The Chinese news agency quoted him as saying. He attacked the 'savage aggression and occupation' suffered by Cambodia and the 'brutal suppression' of Afghanistan. 'Peace in Asia and the world has been gravely endangered,' he said.

In Islamabad, Deputy Defense Minister Xiao Ke headed a mission that presumably discussed increased military aid to Pakistan. A Chinese news Agency despatch said Xiao and Pakistani President Zia Ul-Haq "deemed it necessary to further promote the existing profound ties between the two countries, peoples and armies under the present situation arising from the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan." The meeting occurred almost immediately after Zia had rejected a U.S. aid offer of $400 million.

And, significantly, North Korean President Kim Il Sung has agreed to an official visit by Khieu Samphan, the Cambodian premier-in-exile. Samphan, who took over in December from the hated Pol Pot, has been trying to broaden his regime's support.

North Korea, which looks to both Peking and Moscow for aid, has generally steered a neutral course between them. But Kim's willingness to see Samphan probably signals the extent of the Communist bloc's dismay over Afghanistan and the world reaction to it. Samphan was quoted later as saying that North Korea had promised to aid his Khmer Rouge forces.

Claim security inadequate

Americans close Havana visa office

WASHINGTON, May 5 (AP) — The United States closed its visa office in Havana Sunday in response to an earlier bloody brawl between pro-Castro Cubans and those seeking to leave the country. The action left nearly 380 visa-seeking Cubans stranded inside the old American embassy.

"The present situation with its lack of security or protection for people who have legitimate business with us is intolerable and dangerous," said State Department spokeswoman Anita Stockman. "The United States cannot continue to operate these programs without the guarantees and cooperation of Cuban authorities."

U.S. editors 'concerned' about CIA

MINNEAPOLIS, Minnesota, May 5 (AP) — The American Society of Newspaper Editors has told President Jimmy Carter it is concerned about the U.S. government's policy on the use of U.S. newspaper correspondents as agents for the Central Intelligence Agency.

"We are gravely concerned over the position that you and your director of Central Intelligence have taken on the use of American journalists by the Central Intelligence Agency," said Thomas Winship, editor of the Boston Globe and ASNE president, and Charles W. Bailey, editor of the Minneapolis Tribune and president of the ASNE's freedom of information committee, in an April 18 letter to Carter.

The State Department action Sunday cut off the flow of Cubans seeking to immigrate to the United States. A "freedom flotilla" mounted by Cuban-Americans from Key West, Florida, had brought a total of 9,735 refugees from Cuba as of Saturday morning, the State Department said.

The fighting Friday occurred outside the old American embassy, which is now the U.S. interest section. U.S. officials blamed the brawl on Cuban security agents who they said attacked a crowd of 1,500 Cubans who were staging a protest demanding an end to delays in issuing them U.S. visas.

The State Department said Sunday the 380

Cubans still inside the U.S. interest section refused to leave for fear of what might happen to them. Miss Stockman said they be fed and housed until the situation resolved.

"Our first objective is to guarantee she said. "Our second is to seek Cuban government approval to allow those who documented for entry into the States... to come to the United States... the vast majority of the Cubans the building were qualified for entry United States and "12 in fact are duals."

use of newsmen

Winship and Bailey said ASNE, who represent most of the nation's daily newspapers, agree with the view by A.M. Rosenthal, editor of the New Times.

Rosenthal wrote: "We send correspondents abroad respondents, not as agents. They ask the countries to trust them, to give them access, to allow them to travel about, enjoy the privileges of a correspondent whose only job is to gather the news. "If it's the policy of the U.S. government decide that it can on occasion use a correspondent (as a CIA agent), American correspondent abroad is ately becomes suspect.

FINGERTIP CALCULATION

The revolutionary CASIO Digital Calculator Watch

Introducing another world first from Casio computer technology: the CASIO Calculator Watch C-80. This tiny calculator watch is no larger than a standard-size watch. Yet you work it with your fingertips...not the tip of your pen!

Its unique Finger Touch System (FTS) uses special circuitry to select the correct key for input even if you accidentally touch two keys at once. It adds, subtracts, multiplies, divides and shows the answers on an 8-digit capability. This is a micro computer that you wear on your wrist. Now you can calculate any time, any place.

C-80 is also a multifunctional watch, working as a 1/100th sec. accurate stopwatch as well as offering dual time capabilities for your convenience. Here's the perfect combination of functional beauty and Casio digital electronics...the symbol of the 1980s. CASIO Digital Calculator Watch C-80.

India offers immigrants even outside Assam

DELHI, May 5 (AP) — Immigrant in Assam and the north eastern states cannot be repatriated, will be set in other Indian states, Indian Interior Minister Zail Singh announced Monday. After from the federal government was the eight-month-old agitation against workers in Assam and other eastern states, observers here said that all the five million immigrants should be thrown out of the country as soon as possible. Bangladesh and other countries have refused to take them. The entire problem will have to be viewed from human angle in the light of international agreements," Singh told newsmen. He was referring to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and the late Bangladesh President Sheikh Mujibur Rahman's 1971 agreement maintaining the status quo in Assam. Meanwhile as a reciprocal gesture, the "All Assam Gana Sangram Parishad" (Assam Peoples Fighting Forum), the 11-member body coordinating the agitation announced late Sunday night that they would allow petroleum products to leave refineries in Assam for two days from Monday on an "experimental basis."

Pe appeals for religious liberty

ZZAVILLE, Congo, May 5 (R) — Pope Paul appealed Monday to the leftists to let the Roman church operate in full freedom and that it had no intention of playing

But he said the church sought the right to speak to consciences and for its beliefs to profess their faith publicly. "I know Mr. President that you understand this hope which would not endanger the state," he said. "Religious liberty is in effect the center of respect for all the liberties and inalienable rights of the individual."

Sunday in neighboring Zaire at least nine people were killed and 65 injured when they were trampled on in a crowd while heading for a mass celebrated by the Pope.

ELECTED : Prime Minister Constantine Karamanlis Monday was elected president of Greece. He will succeed Constantine Tsatsos whose five-year term ends on June 20. Karamanlis, 73, leader of the New Democracy party which commands 174 of the 300 seats in Parliament, was the only candidate and received 183 votes in the election by the house. The extra votes came from deputies of the five smaller parties or independents. The prime minister had narrowly failed to get elected in two previous ballots last month when he needed a 200-vote majority.

In quest of rice Liberia leader sweeps aside customs rules

MONROVIA, May 5 (AP) — One of the 17 enlisted men in Liberia's ruling People's Redemption Council flew unannounced to the United States last week without visa or passport and was briefly taken into custody by immigration officials in New York. It was disclosed here Sunday.

His departure from Robert Field Airport, 50 miles from Monrovia, was a scene of bizarre confusion typical of the military regime that took power in Liberia April 12 with the assassination of President William Tolbert, witnesses said.

The council member Cpl. Fallah Voine, also known as Fallah Yancy, is believed to be in the San Francisco area at present trying to negotiate rice purchases for the Liberian state. The U.S. embassy in Monrovia declined to comment on his secret departure from Liberia.

The members of the Redemption Council headed by Master Sgt. Samuel K. Doe, hold virtually unlimited power in the new Liberia and have swept much of the country's traditional order and discipline.

The witnesses said Cpl. Voine-Yancy arrived at Roberts Field late on April 26, escorted by a formidable array of armed security men with howling sirens.

He checked in for an American flight to Kennedy Airport. But when a Liberian immigration official asked for his passport to put in the routine stamp, the corporal said he didn't have his passport with him.

The head of the Roberts Field immigration service insisted, the witnesses reported, saying: "These are our procedures, sir."

Voine-Yancy turned on the immigration chief angrily and said: "Well, I'll show you something of our procedures."

He then ordered the immigration man to be locked in the trunk of a security man's automobile for an hour, while he proceeded calmly to the departure lounge, the witnesses said.

The following day, April 27, the Roberts Field immigration officers went on a one-day protest strike, but the military authorities soon persuaded them to return to work.

The sources said Voine-Yancy arrived at Kennedy early on April 27. When he produced a Liberia army identity card as his only identification, U.S. immigration officers detained him and contacted the State Department.

The American embassy in Monrovia was informed of the incident and quickly confirmed the man's credentials. He was released to the custody of the Liberian consul in New York, but later was allowed to travel to San Francisco.

The sources said he made the unscheduled journey because he was exasperated by delays in clearance of rice shipments to Liberia. The shipments in fact were held up by the military regime's own refusal to approve the necessary letter of credit, but Voine-Yancy decided to solve the problem "by military methods," the sources said.

It was not known why he failed to give the American embassy prior notification of his trip or apply for a diplomatic visa which would have been issued to him within minutes.

Blast victims found

NEW DELHI, May 5 (AP) — Bodies of 26 fire victims, mainly women children workers, have been recovered from the ruins of a fireworks factory near Raipur, central India, the United News of India has reported.

Nearly 50 persons were believed to have perished in the blaze on Saturday, UNI said. The Press Trust of India said Sunday several limbs and heads were strewn about the site, some found 300 meters away.

Most of the bodies were burned beyond recognition. However, the son of the factory owner was positively identified from among the fatal victims.

Bill to call for vote on British EEC role

LONDON, May 5 (AP) — A bill calling for a new referendum on Britain's membership of the European Common Market is to be introduced in the House of Commons later this month. Its sponsor, Dennis Canavan, opposition Labor representative for the Scottish constituency of Stirlingshire West,

Algeria will end exports of LNG

PARIS, May 5 (AP) — Algeria has decided in principle to abandon the production and export of liquefied natural gas, Energy Minister Belkacem Nabi was quoted as saying in an interview published Monday. According to the Paris daily Le Matin, Nabi said that revenue from crude oil exports is sufficient to meet Algeria's hard currency requirements.

Algeria supplies 1.5 per cent of American gas needs. The minister said, "There is nothing to stop American companies from taking delivery (of natural gas) in Spain, for instance, and liquefying it themselves."

Algeria recently suspended deliveries of LNG to the United States after the expiration of the current contract and the failure of negotiations to reach a new price agreement.

"I can reveal that Algeria is ready to give up the exploitation of LNG," he reportedly told the newspaper. "The decision, in principle, has been taken at the highest political level."

Asked if it is a wise decision to give up producing LNG exports after Algeria's massive investments in the field, Nabi was quoted as saying, "I repeat that Algeria is ready, if necessary, to put an end to the LNG experience. But we are willing to sell natural gas to France and to Europe."

claimed Monday that the two-to-one majority for staying in the EEC — the result of a 1975 referendum on continued membership — would be "destroyed" if people were given a chance to vote again.

He said, "There has been a significant switch in public opinion since 1975, and recent polls have confirmed what many of us have been saying for a long time: that our membership has been an unmitigated disaster."

"Membership has cost us thousands of jobs, contributed to rising prices, been detrimental to our fishing industry, and has had a crippling effect on our balance of payments. And now, especially with the breakdown of the Luxembourg summit at which the prime minister failed to get a satisfactory arrangement for our budget contributions, the time is ripe for another referendum."

U.S. plan to cut oil vulnerability falters

WASHINGTON, May 5 (LAT) — As the prospect of military confrontation with Iran increases, America's program to reduce its vulnerability to a major loss of foreign oil supplies is bogged down in political, budgetary and diplomatic stalemate.

"We are like a patient on the respirator and OPEC holds the plug," said Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan. Because world markets are virtually swimming in oil at the moment, the United States and its allies expect to slide easily through the present curtailment of Iranian oil. But any other curtailment, a war, a revolution, or even a simple decision by a major producer to restrict its output, could tighten the market and send prices soaring.

And despite two crises in six years, replete with gasoline lines and cries of public outrage, the United States is still ill-prepared to cope with a major disruption.

The strategic petroleum reserve, once envisioned as a massive 750 million barrel cushion against foreign embargoes, contains a scant 91 million barrels in underground salt domes in Texas and Louisiana. Anxious to save $850 million from the budget, the Carter administration is postponing until June 1981, its plan to resume filling the reserve. A bipartisan group of senators has begun a fight to force an immediate fill-up.

The much-publicized standby gasoline rationing plan, scheduled to go to Congress in February, has virtually disappeared in the bowels of the White House. It will emerge in the next few weeks, administration officials say — accompanied by a request for $100 million and a year's time to finish getting it ready.

President Carter's 10-cent-a-gallon import fee, a disguised gasoline tax to inhibit consumption, is under bitter attack in Congress.

The Department of Energy's system for allocating gasoline during periods of scarcity is "a chaotic program in need of overhaul," according to the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress.

America's No. 2 car producer prepares for sales slump

DEARBORN, Mich., May 5 (LAT) — The Ford Motor Co. official glanced cautiously around his small office in the company's North American headquarters, and then opened his desk drawer. "Now, word of honor, you don't know where you saw this, ok?" he said, taking a photographic slide from a small envelope and handing it to a visitor. Held up to the dim morning light, the color slide showed a prototype model of the sports car Ford will introduce in the spring of 1981, a companion to the front-wheel drive Ford Escort model coming out this fall.

Judging from the slide, the car will have more of a low sloping European look than Ford's previous small-car entries in the U.S. market. As well it should, for the car, like the company's men team of top executives, came from a European mold. And the car, like the new management, is being counted on to turn Ford's money-losing U.S. operations into the same profitable enterprise the company has in Europe.

"We're going to sell 550,000 of these new small cars in the first year," said one Ford executive, referring to both the sport and regular version of the Escort. "That's a lead-pipe cinch. If it isn't, you'll be thinking to somebody else next year."

Indeed, this executive — along with several others at the nation's No. 2 auto maker — has been rumored to be headed for "early retirement," the industry euphemism for being fired, if Ford's fortunes don't turn around soon.

Ford lost $41 million in the final quarter of 1979, and analysts believe it could lose over $200 million in all of 1980 as it retrenches in the industry's worst recession in five years. Ford and its two major rivals, Chrysler Corp. and General Motors Corp., have pulled out of previous postwar economic downturns in relatively good health.

But analysts say this slump is different from earlier ones, different even from the 1975 recession. It happened as quickly as the gasoline lines formed a year ago and buyers turned their backs on most U.S.-made cars, perceived as being less fuel-efficient than foreign autos. The resulting drop in sales and income at a time when the U.S. companies need to spend billions remodeling their big-car factories has been a disaster for the Detroit-based industry.

Only a miracle can save nearly bankrupt Chrysler. Giant GM should survive with sharp cutbacks in operations and perhaps some outside borrowing. Ford is somewhere in between, with some gloomy analysts predicting that it will have to cut out certain product lines to prosper again.

Ford is a microcosm of how a big-car product and marketing strategy got the U.S. industry into its current predicament — and of the keen determination industry executives now have to show the world that they, too, know how to build hot-selling small cars.

The reversal of the car market is particularly ironic for Ford, which in the early 1970s considered itself more successful than GM in

"We're spending $11 billion a year on the Department of Energy and at those prices it certainly should be prepared for emergencies," said Rep. Jim Lloyd, D-Calif., who requested the GAO inquiry.

If the nation was plagued by service station lines in 1979, when it lost 800,000 barrels daily from Iran, what would happen tomorrow if others cut back supplies to the United States?

"We would be in deep, deep trouble," an Energy Department official acknowledged. Despite the popularity of gasoline rationing in many polls and numerous congressional offices, the government needs a full year just to compile and put on computer tape the vehicle registration files on which ration coupon distribution would be based.

If an emergency hits now, "quick and dirty" plans would be improvised to cut down the usage of gasoline, the petroleum product that can be most easily eliminated, according to Energy Department thinking. Under a plan being prepared now in final version, the president would order states to restrain demand. If the states did not meet tough conservation targets, the federal government would step in to keep drivers away from their cars.

The small and mid-sized segments of the U.S. auto market. One executive who asked not to be identified, said top Ford officials in those days wanted to make more profit on each car sold, and decided to move more aggressively into the GM-dominated full-sized end of the market, traditionally the most profitable.

"We were just getting there, just really getting competitive with GM by 1978, and the music changed," he said. "Somebody changed the dance." During this same period, GM was reacting to the oil price hike, and moving in the other direction, toward smaller cars. GM is now at least a year ahead of Ford in taking weight and inches off its big-car lines.

Outsiders, most notably former Ford President Lee Iacocca, now chairman of Chrysler, blame the autocratic regime of Henry Ford II for slowing the move to smaller cars. (Henry Ford fired Iacocca in 1978). But company officials argue that the slim Ford profit in the recession year of 1975 left the company unable to afford the kind of immediate small-car programs GM could buy.

Bennett E. Bidwell, vice president of car and truck operations, said that shortly after the gasoline crisis a year ago started the latest boom in sales of small cars, some Ford executives remained convinced that big-car sales would rebound strongly, just as they had after the 1973-74 Arab oil embargo.

"They thought Americans would always buy the bigger ice cream cone," he said. "But things are a little different than they were in 1974." A tour of Ford's massive Rouge River factory complex in this Detroit suburb turns

Second Suez tunnel planned

LONDON, May 5 (AP) — The Egyptian government has asked the British engineering group Tarmac and its Egyptian partners to investigate prospects of building a second tunnel link under the Suez Canal, the group said Sunday. Tarmac and one of Egypt's biggest construction groups, Arab Contractors, are currently working on the final stages of the first tunnel under the canal. They started the $146.25 million road tunnel some 3½ years ago.

The second canal tunnel project is planned as a rail link and, like the road tunnel, is designed as part of Egypt's plans to develop the Sinai region. A third crossing also is planned for the waterway, but this will be a bridge.

Earlier this week, Britain's junior minister, Cecil Parkinson, attended a ceremony on the East Bank of canal with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt to mark the tunnel breakthrough into Sinai. Parkinson has been in Egypt for a week of talks on economic matters aimed at encouraging further commercial links with Britain.

Sunday he hinted that some form of E government backing may be available for a second Egyptian-British tunnel project ahead. "We back British exporters, as would like to see this successful partnership continue," he said. "We will help in every way we can." One form that British backing take is export credit guarantees.

Kuwait interest rate drops

KUWAIT, May 5 (AP) — Interest rates on overnight and week-long loans fell from 12 and 15 per cent to two and 7.5 per cent in Kuwait as a result of the pumping of large funds into the system, the Commercial Bank of Kuwait said Sunday in its weekly report.

The trend was encouraged by the influx of large quantities of money from outside following the decline in rates in the Eurodollar market in anticipation of recessionary trends in the U.S. economy, the report said.

Fixed-period interest rates also slipped from 12.5 to 9.5 per cent for one month and from 17.5 to 11.2 for one year, the report added.

Subroto to attend Taif meeting

JAKARTA, Indonesia, May 5 (AP) — Mining and Energy Minister Subroto will head an Indonesian delegation to a special meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Taif, Subroto told reporters the meeting will discuss OPEC long-term strategy and the possibility of increasing oil prices. Indonesia's export price currently stands at $32.32 per barrel. The country produces about 1.6 million barrels per day.

Oil chiefs to oppose Saudi price

BEIRUT, May 5 (AP) — Algerian Oil Minister Abdel Kacem Nabi said Monday he is sceptical about the oil exporting countries unifying their prices on the basis of the Saudi Arabian rate. He also said that Algeria would oppose any plan to index rates to economic activity in the industrialized countries.

nothing that the demand for refined products increased in April after a first quarter decline that led to lower prices.

The Algerian minister also deplored the fact that the rate for natural gas is less than that for oil "just when liquefied natural gas has become an alternative energy source and should thus cost more."

Australian coal, steel strike likely

CANBERRA, May 5 (AP) — Steel works have cut output, and the power and export sectors are likely to be hit by a coal industry dispute in New South Wales and Queensland. Pit owners have stood down miners who are restricting their work week to three days in support of a demand for an extra week's annual holiday.

Tito's death creates power vacuum

Soviets, West, Slavic nationalists could disrupt stability in Balkans

BELGRADE, May 5 (R) — President Josip Broz Tito's death ends an era of powerful significance in eastern Europe creating a dangerous vacuum at a time of international tension.

The Yugoslav leader's vision ranged far beyond his Balkan homeland. Last survivor of the military and political titans of World War II, he was the first Communist party leader to break free from Moscow's control.

As a world statesman, he gained formidable stature. He turned non-alignment into a compelling and credible third force.

His death three days before his 88th birthday comes at a bleak moment after Soviet armed intervention in Afghanistan, the development of new East-West tensions, a resulting slowdown in détente, and a drawn-out crisis over the holding of U.S. hostages in Iran.

In his last months Tito seemed preoccupied over what he saw as a gathering threat to peace. Last May, in an anxious speech, he warned against "attempts to divide the world anew."

News Analysis

As he lay ill in January, Yugoslavia voted with 103 other countries in the U.N. General Assembly for the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan. The vote mirrored Tito's sense of history, his vigorous independence and Yugoslavia's own fear of Soviet intervention.

Tito's illness, only days after the Soviet thrust into Afghanistan, provoked a spasm of Yugoslav apprehension.

For Yugoslavs the coincidence was a grim portent, a throwback to 1956 when Soviet troops marched into neighboring Hungary, and 1968 when Soviet bloc armies invaded Czechoslovakia. Yugoslavia protested against both actions.

Since 1948, when Tito broke with the Kremlin, Yugoslavs have lived with the fear of a Soviet attack, political intrigue, subversion or attempts at destabilization across the country's 1,700-km eastern borders.

The fears diminished when East-West détente blossomed but revived whenever tension reappeared.

When Tito fell ill in January, with the world still shaken by the Afghan incursion, Yugoslavs felt a graver sense of vulnerability. Belgrade's future leadership seemed still unsettled and there was a strong perception of new perils ahead.

In the intervening weeks, Yugoslavs learned to live with the inevitability of Tito's death. The collective leadership he chose in recent years took over automatically and seemed to function efficiently.

By the time Tito died, the fears had abated and there seemed to be a fresh sense of confidence.

Nevertheless, the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan was seen in Belgrade as potentially more menacing than the Kremlin's action in crushing reformist government in Hungary and Czechoslovakia, both members of the Soviet-led Warsaw pact. Afghanistan, like Yugoslavia, belongs to the 95-nation non-aligned movement. Its president until last Dec. 27 was a Marxist who apparently fell out with the Kremlin and his successor is a loyal supporter of the Soviet Union.

Yugoslavs see chilling similarities. Tito posed a successful challenge to Moscow for 32 years. In "Communist terms" he was the arch-reformer, a deviationist on basic issues of policy and dogma.

Despite periodic attempts to patch up inter-state relations, Josef Stalin's successors in the Kremlin never forgave him for his revolt against Soviet political control.

In 1948 Stalin threatened: "I will shake my little finger, and there will be no more Tito." Soviet bloc armies marched menacingly up and down Yugoslavia's borders and the Kremlin imposed a massive economic blockade.

Tito's breakaway regime survived and eventually flourished, evolving innovative new forms and setting a contagious example for Eastern Europe and later for the Eurocommunists of Western Europe.

The Yugoslav leader never abandoned the Marxist faith he embraced as a locksmith's apprentice in the old Austro-Hungarian Empire. But gradually he relaxed the dictatorship he imported from the Soviet Union.

When he died the 22 million Yugoslavs enjoyed greater personal liberty, virtually unhindered freedom to travel and higher living standards than anywhere else in Eastern Europe. Yugoslavia was the only Communist country to boast of having a consumer society.

Tito became a popular and even beloved national leader. He maintained strict one-party rule, although he pioneered a unique system of workers' control and self-management of state industry under a decentralized government.

His party maintained supreme authority, but it was softer, and gentler than in any of the countries of the Soviet bloc. When Hungarian Communists braved Soviet tanks in Budapest in 1956, they followed the independent "Titoist" road charted by Yugoslavia. Czechoslovakia's vain search for "socialism with a human face," 12 years later, was inspired by Tito's ideal.

Although the Soviet Union may hope for a weaker Yugoslavia after Tito, leaders here do not expect warlike actions from Moscow. "There is a threat but no imminent danger," said one official.

Nevertheless, the country's 270,000-strong armed forces are on alert to meet all contingencies. Eight million civilians have been trained as a home army, ready for guerrilla warfare, sabotage, police action against foreign subversion.

Yugoslavia's geographical location in the Balkans, historically Europe's "powder keg," is both strategic and perilous. Belgrade is within easy striking distance from Soviet forces based in or conveyed across Hungary. Neighboring Bulgaria is a hard-line Soviet bloc state with fast sea links to Russia.

NON-ALIGNED: President Josip Broz Tito, who died Sunday, is shown in this 1960 photograph following talks with Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser. The place was the Yugoslav embassy in New York and the subject of the discussion was non-alignment.

For 30 years, Bulgaria has quarreled with Yugoslavia over the Macedonians who live in both countries. This is a potential for trouble, and Yugoslavs believe it could be exploited by Moscow.

With Tito gone, Yugoslavia confronts daunting problems in maintaining national unity, consolidating party and state leadership, and in overcoming economic strains that are among Europe's worst.

In a country that has been united only for 60 years, Belgrade faces enormous pressures from regional groups whose historical tendency has been to separate and fight rather than cooperate.

Tito, often called the only real Yugoslav, had the flair, authority and political dexterity to keep Serbs and Croats together, and to dampen the resentments felt by northern Slovenes over development aid channeled to southern Montenegro and Macedonia.

In the 1970s, Tito cracked down against nationalists within the Communist parties of Serbia and Croatia. In Muslim areas of Bosnia, there are fears of an Islamic backlash. Almost everywhere, there is a strong sense of regional identity and separatism is a potent force.

Tito's successors face their major test in continuing his adroit policy of national togetherness. They are convinced that failure could produce disruption and chaos, making Yugoslavia vulnerable to Soviet pressure or penetration.

The new leadership believes it may be threatened also by militant Serbian and Croatian nationalist émigrés living in the West who in recent years mounted frequent terror attacks against the Tito regime.

There is a lesser fear from pro-Soviet hardliners who may be tempted into new activity or turn to Moscow for support.

A man, a bat, a machine — and memories

By Stuart Hertzberg

CHICAGO, May 5 — It was a hot August day. On my way to an appointment in a small town, I drove past an old-fashioned amusement park — a decrepit miniature golf course and two ancient batting cages. A rare sight today. A couple of miles down the road, memories started flowing of batting, baseball and endless summer days when friends and I would play inning after inning in T-shirts, jeans, caps and sneakers. I turned the car around. With my mitt dangling from my handle bars, my bat straddled across the bars firmly secured by each thumb, and my right pants leg carefully rolled up, I pedaled back.

When I got to the park, I took off my suit coat and ambled over to the batting cage. In the cage was one bat and my opponent, the Iron Mike, an automatic pitching machine. He would not play with me unless I put in a quarter. It simply was not right. Nonetheless, I picked up the bat, turned the dial to the slowest possible speed, and deposited his fee. A whirr announced that the first pitch was on the way. Strike one.

Strikes two through seven quickly followed. On the eighth and final pitch, progress was made in the form of the slightest nick of a foul tip. That tease of contact cost me another quarter. Eight more balls followed, and soon I was hitting some rather impressive foul tips and even managing to hit occasional vicious grounders and line drives which were certain to find the holes between desperately diving infielders — had there only been infielders.

Another quarter. Eight more hits. I got some more change and hurried back to my automatic friend whose number I had and who was about to receive a lesson in humility.

In a cocky manner calculated to enrage him, I turned the dial to "fast," resumed my stance, and took my preparatory half-swings while looking as menacing as possible. Either I had him completely psyched out or he needed a tune-up, because the balls were being hurled at me at the same slow speed as before. He did not even have the guts to brush me back as I dug in and slashed out base hits.

Quarter followed quarter. Years of unborn base hits had to be given life before I could return to the everyday. Only then was I able to stop. My shirt and the top half of my tie were soaking wet. As I walked back to my car, I realized that the rest of the day was going to be quite uncomfortable.

The next morning I couldn't turn my neck. My shoulder muscles throbbled. Unfortunately, I knew that the Iron Mike was still out there throwing his pitches and earning his quarters.

Windmills remain undefeated. (NYT)

Afghan requests weapons from Islamic nations

ABU DHABI, May 5 (AP) — An Afghan leader visiting the country appealed to Islamic leaders Monday to supply his movement with modern weapons to fight against the Soviet invasion of his country.

"Our fighters are badly in need of weapons capable of dealing with Soviet air power and tanks," Abdul Rasul Saifi, the president of the Afghan Islamic Alliance for the Liberation of Afghanistan, was quoted as saying by the official Gulf News Agency.

"The people of Afghanistan have already proved their ability to face Soviet forces, despite their superiority, but they are badly in need of such modern weapons," the agency quoted him as saying.

Islamic states, particularly the Gulf states, agreed during the Islamic Conference in Islamabad last January to supply the Afghan fighters with funds to continue their anti-Soviet struggle. But the freedom fighters complain that these promises of help have yet to be fulfilled.

Saifi was also quoted as saying his movement rejects the idea of the establishment of an Afghan government in exile. He said the Afghan liberation movement will establish a government in Afghan liberated territory.

Good Morning

By Jibad Khazen

We talked of coordination. Now, coordination when it comes to journalism. Y see, a poor journalist sometimes feels simply cannot cope. There are days when you sit around waiting for a headline materialize, wondering how come the world has suddenly gone quiet. Why Zbiggy lying doggo, what happened those rebels in Upper Wanga Wany. You toy with the idea of sending the old boy into the streets for a Man Bites I story and then, suddenly:

Afghanistan Ablaze: Red Army Mo In: Hostages In Tehran! Rescue Miss Flounders! Cubans Abandon Cuba While Sea Storm Rages! There you are month's worth of news all in one day.

Imagine what could've been done with the Cuban story by itself. Weeks: weeks of political and economic commentary, "human angle" stories, even a bit to our underemployed "science wallah" report on the weather pattern of that's between Miami and Cuba. As it is, C merited no more than a mention.

Now this for us is serious. It's bread, butter (all right, and the odd dollop jam). You can't squander a month's of lines in a morning. What will you have sell the next? In a word: Coordinatio

You see the world's troublemaker (which means most of the world leas plus aspirants to these exalted posit plus whatever dwindling number of idists are left) have to realize that they s ply can't keep treating us in this about able way. They need us as we need th and they have to fulfil their req sibilities toward us. What good we their revolutions, counterrevolution invasions, liberations, occupations them without us to help?

What's needed here is, as we said, coordination. The Cubans want to leave ba...bully for them! Zbiggy wants to cut rough...atta boy Zbiggy! No skin of noses. We'll report it, and throw i human angle story for free. We'll c ment ponderously. We'll offer three s tions for each and every problem. B IT HAS ALL TO BE ORGANIZ EACH MUST WAIT HIS TU SPACE THINGS OUT NICELY. FI LET THE CUBANS OUT...THEN ZBIGGY LOOSE.

That way we both stand a chance.

Japan shoppers lead list of Hong Kong spenders

HONG KONG, May 5 (AP) — Tourists are spending more than ever before in this shoppers' paradise and the Japanese are out-spending everyone else. But the once free-wheeling Americans have fallen far behind on the list of big spenders.

Undaunted by rising prices, more than 2.2 million tourists from around the globe poured the equivalent of nearly $1.2 billion into the Hong Kong economy during 1979 — more than $765 million just on shopping.

"Shopping is still the thing for coming to Hong Kong," said Henry B.C. Cheng, a spokesman for the Hong Kong Tourist Association. "And our policy now and for the next few years is to attract high-yield visitors who stay longer and spend more."

Since the early 1970's when the tourist association began conducting shopping surveys, the Japanese have been the biggest spenders. In 1979, the average Japanese tourist spent $475, primarily on handbags, wallets, jewelry with precious stones, perfume, lighters, cigarettes, handicrafts and Chinese medicine.

In a three-way tie for second place on the extravagant shoppers list are the Spaniards, Taiwanese and Australians who spent an average of about $400 apiece. They were followed by tourists from the Middle East, Central and South America, South Korea, West Germany, Belgium, Austria, the Philippines and Italy.

The Americans tied for 10th place with the Thais, spending an average of about $300. American tourists led the world in purchases of antiques and carved stones, tied the Japanese in buying souvenirs and handicrafts — but were only average buyers of jewelry, watches and clothing which were the top items for U.S. shoppers in the early 1970's.

The low-spending bargain hunters include the Swiss, Indians, Pakistanis and Sri Lankans, South Africans, Scandinavians, French

'Big as palm trees'

Angry Ping 'monsters' terrify Thai villagers

BANGKOK, May 5 (AP) — Villagers who live near the River Ping north of here say two black monsters "as big as palm trees" have risen from the depths to take revenge because a fisherman stole some of their eggs.

Thousands of villagers from miles away gathered the next night in Kamphaeng province and a religious ceremony was performed at the edge of the water, but the Loch Ness-style monsters failed to reappear, Thai newspapers report.

It all started last Thursday when fisherman Prachob Pongpaew dove into the river to look for fish and discovered 17 strange eggs linked to each other as big as watermelons, the newspapers report.

He broke off five of them, leaving the others in place, and carried them to the surface. The eggs were broken open in Song-tamm village. But they smelled so bad they were thrown to the dogs, who ran away in fear. The bad smell spread to an extensive area filling almost the entire village, according to Thai Rath newspaper.

That night, the villagers were awakened by sweeping sounds coming from the River Ping.

They ran to its banks and saw "two black snakes black in color and as big as a tree" with crests on their heads, emerging from the river," Thai Rath reported.

The next night, according to the English-language daily Bangkok Post, thousands of people lined the banks of the Ping to wait for the monsters.

A shrine was set up near the water and a traditional "krathong" carrying a candle and incense was floated out into the current. A medium, Oon Chok-Kaeo, said the krathong would be swallowed up by a whirlpool where the monsters were believed to be living.

According to Oon, this whirlpool was once regarded as a sacred place. In ancient times, men accused of crimes were sent out into the river, where the innocent were expected to survive and the guilty to be swallowed up by the whirlpool.

The Post also reported that after the sighting of the monsters, villagers refrained from bringing their buffaloes to bathe in the river.
